'Sardar Patel The Architect of Unification'

On the occasion of

NATIONAL UNITY DAY

31 OCTOBER 2022

EXHIBITION

THE ARCHITECT OF UNIFICATION

India was invaded and ruled by the foreigners who tried to divide India in the name of religion, region, language, caste, creed and culture. India's struggle to retain its united identity has been phenomenal. Our freedom fighters realised the importance of unity during their fight against the colonial imperialism and worked hard to enlighten the masses about the strength of Unity. Being born on this ancient land, we all should remember and cherish the ancient roots of our culture, which says "Ekoham Bahusyam" which means

"I am one expressed through many."

On the occasion of National Unity Day, it's our solemn duty to remember the important contributions of Sardar Vallabhabhai Patel-the Architect of Unification, who played a leading role in India's freedom struggle, guiding its integration into a united, independent nation. Many thought, a diverse country like India can never remain united. It will fall apart. But, Sardar Vallabhabhai Patel showed the way how India would remain strong and united. We, as citizens of India should learn how to grow from strength to strength and stay united.

As we all know, the Hon'ble Prime Minister of India, Shri. Narendra Modi in his speech on 15th August, 2022 at Red Fort had mentioned about the strength of Unity and Integrity as one of the "Panch Pran". In the first year of Amrit Kaal, 31st October is being celebrated as National Unity Day to remember the pran of unity and integrity and vow for it.

Government of India

Introduction

Before independence India was divided into two types of territories: the British India provinces— governed directly by British, and the princely states- who recognized British suzerainty in return for local autonomy. The State were free to accede with whichever dominion they wished keeping the principle of geographical contiguity in consideration or to remain independent. The problem seemed a gigantic one but, as Lord Mountbatten said in his address to the Indian Constituent Assembly on August 15, 1947, “it was tackled successfully by the "far-sighted statesman," Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel.

A separate States Ministry was formed on 5 July 1947 with an objective of political integration of 565 princely states, comprising 2/5th of the territory, and Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel assumed charge as the States Minister and later as Home Minister of independent India.

Between 1947 and 1950, three princely states- Hyderabad, Kashmir and Junagadh signed Instrument of Accession and their territories were politically integrated into the Indian union. The others which had merged into the existing provinces were organized into new provinces, such as Rajputana, Himachal Pradesh, Madhya Bharat and Vindhya Pradesh.

Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel:

31 October 1875– 15 December 1950

A brief biography

Born on 31 October 1875 at Karamsad in Kaira district of Gujarat, Vallabhbhai Patel received school education at Karamsad, Petlad and Nadiad. He passed the District Pleader Examination in 1900, started practice at Godhra and became a successful criminal lawyer, later shifted at Borsard in 1902. On return from London in 1913 with a degree of barrister, he shifted to Ahmedabad and established himself as foremost criminal lawyer.

Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel:

31 October 1875– 15 December 1950

A brief biography

His political journey started in 1915 by becoming the member of Gujarat Sabha that was later converted into Gujarat Provincial Committee in 1919. Being President of the Gujarat Provincial Conference, Mahatma Gandhi appointed Vallabhbhai Patel as the Secretary of its Executive Committee in 1917. Since then Vallabhbhai Patel remained with Gandhiji in all his agitations and social works. He successfully led the agitations of Ahmedabad Mill workers and the peasants of Kheda in 1918. In 1924, he was elected as President of the Ahmedabad Municipal Corporation. As leader of Bardoli Satyagraha in 1928, Patel's determination brought the brutal and tyrannical British authorities to their knees. He was given the title of 'Sardar' by the local peasants of Bardoli. He spent over 9 years in jail in different terms during the struggle for freedom.

The years 1947 to 1950 when India marched towards freedom and democracy after partition and mass upheavals, Sardar's brilliance as Deputy Prime Minister and Home Minister overcame these troubles. As he said on the eve of the first independence anniversary, 'In free India there is no room for divided loyalties', his determination brought 565 princely states under one India and reorganised them into an new administrative set up.

NÓ ROOM FOR DIVIDED LOYALTY IN INDIA
—SARDAR PATEL

Today, the first anniversary of our freedom marks a definite stage in our progress; we can afford to look, alone and after. We recall to mind the warmth and feeling with which we entered in our independence this day last year, the tragedies and sorrows which followed immediately in its wake, the stream of destitute, ill-fed and ill-equipped refugees which flowed into India from across the frontier, the serious threat to her existence and stability which we had to meet inside our borders, the inhuman atrocities and brutalities perpetrated by barbaric hordes from a neighbouring country on the holy and peaceful Valley of Kashmir, the hardships inflicted on our homes by Fascist hordes of Raskass supported by the armed forces of Hyderabad and a host of other difficult and complex problems with which we had to grapple in the very first year of our liberation from the foreign yoke.

"Prophets were not wanting who predicted utter confusion and collapse, we had to contend with obstructive, hostile and subversive among our own countrymen. We had to avert eye cast on us from far and near. Nevertheless, with the solid support of our people, the unremitting labour of our

Father of the Nation still runs on his heels, we could miss the heavy night that lay in through many a period of gloom. On the economic front, we are still paying the penalty of compulsory lack of co-ordinated efforts and the absence of industrial peace between employers and the employees, and the need of the hour is the irresistible call of industrial discipline.

During the past year, therefore, we have followed some hopes and held some fears. On the whole, we have moved on the way of the many difficulties which lay in our path. It is naturally our mind even now is filled with both that regrets and future years, but I can say with confidence that if the spirit with which we won and laboured in our independence continues to guide us, if the indomitable courage and stern determination with which we overcame the many dangers that threatened us in our very first year of self-rule continue to govern us and if we behave with absolute discipline and sense of responsibility, we have ample justification for our optimism.

Accession, Integration and Reorganization of States

'The masterly handling of the rulers (Princes) by Sardar was the foremost factor in the success of the accession policy. The rulers soon came to recognize him as a stable force in Indian politics and as one who would give them a fair deal. Added to this, his unfailing politeness, the rulers viewed against his reputation as the 'Iron Man of India', endeared him to them and created such confidence that all accepted his advice without demur'.

UNION OF DECCAN STATES
Phaltn
14 September 1946

My dear Sardar Sahib,

I have been favoured with a letter dated 8 September from the Hon'ble Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru regarding the question of the joint views of you both. I am sure the letter represents to you for carrying out the assurance which you gave me in my personal visit to you in Bombay on 16 August. The views expressed by Panditji in his letter clearly bear the impress of the joint consultation of you both. I am fully satisfied at the attitude displayed in the letter. I shall now take up the matter with my brother rulers and I feel it will be up to us all to act up to the advice.

I shall never forget the kindness and courtesy which you have shown to me personally. The stress and strain under which all of you have been working for the past few months only heightens our admiration for you.

With renewed thanks and deep respects,

Yours sincerely,
Malojirao'

Baroda

20/9/1947
New Delhi
20th Sept 1947

My dear Maharaja Sahib,

Baroda State has received reports from Baroda to the effect that although the State Government had made all arrangements for the celebration of August 15, the Independence Day, in a befitting manner, it was Your Highness who countermanded the orders and stopped all celebrations. Considering that Your Highness was the first ruler to accede to the Indian Union and has always taken a keen interest in the struggle of this country for Independence, we cannot believe that this could be true, and would be grateful for information on the point.

We hope Your Highness will not treat this enquiry as an attempt on the part of the Indian Government to interfere in the internal affairs of Baroda State, the avoidance of which is, and will always remain, the policy of the Government of India.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,
V.P. Menon.

Major General His Highness Maharaja
of Pratap Singh Gaekwad, Late His Highness
Maharaja Sahib, C.I.C.,
Maharaja of Baroda.

INSTRUMENT OF ACCESSION

MAHARAJA His Majesty's representative in the exercise of the functions of the Crown in the relations with Indian States has exercised certain powers and jurisdiction in relation to the estate of His Highness Maharaja, under the Deccan States.

AND WHEREAS certain of these powers and jurisdiction were transferred to the State to which the said Maharaja has acceded.

AND WHEREAS such attachment has ceased by reason of the passing of the Indian Independence Act.

AND WHEREAS I, His Highness Maharaja, as the Maharaja of the said State, do hereby declare that the Deccan States all the powers and jurisdiction which were exercisable before the said date by His Majesty's representative for the exercise of the functions of the Crown in the relations with the Indian States.

AND WHEREAS I, Maharaja, do hereby declare that I authorize the Government of India to exercise all the said powers and jurisdiction in relation to the said State in such manner and through such agency or agencies as the Government may from time to time determine.

Yours sincerely,
Maharaja Sahib of Baroda

My dear Dewan Sahib,

I have received your letter of the 23rd instant only today, owing to the postal strike.

I am sorry to hear that you are not getting the requisite co-operation in your efforts to liberalise the administration from the Praja Mandal members. I was under the impression that things were going on smoothly in Baroda, particularly because Shri Chhotubhai Sutaria, who is one of the trusted and responsible leaders of the Praja Mandal, happens to be in your council. Now that you have brought this matter to my notice, I will certainly look into the matter and try to be as helpful as possible.

Baroda has got a good opportunity. It has got resources, traditions and materials enough to give a lead to all the States in India at this critical period of our history. It is so surrounded and intermingled with British Gujarat and the general level of the people is so advanced that with goodwill, trust and co-operation, the State can safely start an experiment of full responsible government straightaway and take the credit of being the pioneer State, which, in fact, is in consonance with its past traditions.

My services would be at your disposal, as I am interested in Baroda as one of the ex-presidents of the Baroda Praja Mandal and as one who has numerous friends and relations in Baroda State.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

Constitution of India

The process of integration was threefold and known as "Patel Scheme". The Constitution of 1950 accordingly distinguished between three main types of states and territories:

1. A total 216 princely states were merged into the respective provinces (British provinces) contiguous to them. These merged states were included in the territories of the states in Part A.
2. Sixty-one princely states were converted and merged into centrally administered areas and included in Part C of the First Schedule of the Constitution of India.
3. The sole Part D territory was the Andaman and Nicobar Islands.
4. The third form of assimilation was the states included in Part B of the Constitution of India; these numbered eight in all.

KASHMIR

The State of Jammu and Kashmir is geographically contiguous to both India and Pakistan. While Raja Hari Singh was in the process of deciding on the question of accession, the Kashmir was invaded by armed Pakistani tribal with the assistance of Pakistan. On desperate appeal made by Maharaja on 24 October 1947 the Government of India accepted the accession of his State and sent military aid and troops to defend the territory. Maharaja set up a Government in the State under the leadership of Sheikh Abdullah.

V.K. Krishna Menon, India's High Commissioner in London issued India's first official response (9 November 1947). He noted that the events in Kashmir were not 'raids' but a full fledged invasion that was sponsored and supported by Pakistan.

India's Ministry of Defence released a report of the operation on 31 October 1947. ...by now the enemy was already at Baramula, the strategic bottleneck which opens into the Srinagar valley. Once the invaders were allowed to enter and fanout into the Srinagar valley. Once the invaders were allowed to enter and fanout into the Srinagar plain the game was up estimated at about 2000 to 5000 (invaders) at Baramulla with his (Col. Rai's) woefully inadequate force he had to decide to give immediate battle or wait till reinforcements arrived. If he had taken the latter course it might have proved too late and invaders might have reached Srinagar. He chose the former and crashed into the invaders column at Baramula with one company leaving a second in his rear and a third to guard the air field at the end the invaders fled in utter disorder leaving 500 dead on the field... on 8 November Baramula the key to Srinagar was recaptured and the security was underwritten....'

Sardar Patel- The Architect of Unification

JUNAGADH

After Partition, we had a huge problem. Those who partitioned the country had mental reservations. They thought that this Partition was not the last word, and they started the game immediately thereafter. Among the Kathiawar States, they went to Junagadh and got its Accession to Pakistan.... We woke up in time and those who tried to play the game saw that we were not sleeping.

-Sardar Patel

The Nawab of Junagadh, Muhammad Mahabat Khanji, evaded the principle of geographical contiguity (Chamber of Princes meeting on July 25, 1947), without asking the advice of his subjects and against the advice of his fellow princes of Kathiawar, acceded to Pakistan instead of to the Indian Dominion with which the State of Junagadh was geographically contiguous.

The Government of India opposed the impropriety of this accession, and demanded a clear verdict by public referendum. The Nawab never having consulted his people in regard to accession could not face the difficulties created by the geographical situation of the State and the will of his own people. Fearing the rising tide of public feeling, Nawab fled to Pakistan. on the behest of the Dewan and the Commissioner of Police, and the Government of India took over the administration of Junagadh on November 9, 1947. However government decided to reach a decision after conducting a plebiscite, that was held from 12 -20 February 1948. The result was overwhelmingly in favour of accession to the Indian Union, the number of votes polled was 190,870. Of these, 190,779 were for India and only 91 for Pakistan. A diplomatic success of Sardar Patel's untiring efforts.

COMBINED OPERATIONS OF LAND, AIR & NAVAL FORCES

Junagadh Crisis Deepens

MOUNTBATTEN'S PEACE MISSION

NEW DELHI, Oct. 4. In response to a request from certain of the Kathiawar States, a small military force is being moved to Porbandar and will be based there on the morning of 10th October from ships of the Royal Indian Navy, says a communication issued from the Prime Minister's Secretariat.

In making this movement of troops, opportunity has been taken to carry out combined operations training to practice in the services of the operations.

The move comes in the wake of the report that the Junagadh ruler, Sir Hanuvelalji, has decided to accede to Pakistan. The Government of India has decided to send a small force to Porbandar to maintain law and order in the area.

The Royal Indian Navy ships which are being moved to Porbandar are the H.M.S. 'Seydlitz' and the H.M.S. 'Gurkha'. The H.M.S. 'Seydlitz' is a minesweeper and the H.M.S. 'Gurkha' is a transport ship.

Refusal To Recognise State's Entry Into Pakistan

PLEBISCITE PROPOSED FOR DECIDING FUTURE Recall of Troops From Indian Territory Demanded

NEW DELHI, Oct. 4. The Government of India has refused to accept the accession of the Junagadh State to Pakistan in the circumstances in which it was made and "strongly criticise with the views and assistance of Pakistan in regard to Baluchistan and Mangochi."

The Government of India considers "that the accession of Junagadh State to Pakistan and Mangochi, both of which have been accorded to the Indian Dominion, is an unjustified and provocative act of aggression," and ask for their return to India.

Referring their opinion to such an accession to the Government of India, the Government of India says: "The Government of India is not prepared to accept the accession of Junagadh State to Pakistan in the circumstances in which it was made and strongly criticise with the views and assistance of Pakistan in regard to Baluchistan and Mangochi."

JUNAGADH RULER ABDICATES?

Flying Scotsman Derailed

23 KILLED, 70 INJURED

LONDON, Oct. 26. The "Flying Scotsman," one of Britain's fastest and best-known trains, was derailed today near Doncaster, Yorkshire, and seven persons were killed and about 70 injured.

The train, which was carrying 200 passengers, was derailed on the approach to Doncaster station on the outskirts of London, Friday.

The derailed train was derailed at 11.15 a.m. for London and was derailed at Doncaster, six miles from Doncaster.

Two coaches left the tracks and three of them were hurled into a field below.

Amateur private cars and trucks were used to transport the injured to Doncaster railway station.

Coaches placed on a crane, were swung the first to arrive at the scene and they helped to dislodge the trapped passengers, as well as giving first aid to others.

Some of the injured were cut for flying glass and jagged bits of the framework of the train.

Later reports said 23 people were killed in the rail crash, thirty bodies were recovered.

HYDERABAD

The Nizam Mir Usman Ali Khan Bahadur of Hyderabad signed a standstill agreement (agreements which existed between the Crown and the Nizam before 15 August, 1947) for one year on 29 November 1947 to buy time for independence which was expected to create an atmosphere of goodwill. The Nizam violated several ordinances and also people were continued to be subjected to the tyranny of the organization called Majlis-i-Ittehad-Musalmein with its military volunteer corps of Razakars. The Government of India made several attempts to settle the matter amicably but failed, finally a military operation named 'Operation Polo' against Nizam was initiated on 13 September 1948, lasted barely 108 hours, resulting in accession of the State into the Indian Union.

The British Commander-in-Chief of the Indian Army, General Bucher writes K.M. Munshi-

'was hesitant throughout. He overestimated the capability of the Hyderabad army, underestimated that of his own troops, and knew not the ability of Sardar... to deal with the problems of internal law and order. Like most Englishmen, he was unable to realise that no price was too high to be paid for eliminating the razakar menace which threatened the very existence of India'.

'Patel was the man who by his decisiveness resolved the great Hyderabad crisis. Hyderabad, a State covering 80,000 square miles in the heart of peninsular India, was at that time in the grip of an unscrupulous minority which aimed at secession from India. Had the bid succeeded, India might not have survived as a political unit. This situation needed a man of iron who would not balk at coercive action, and in Sardar, India had, at the vital moment, just the man.'

My dear Jawaharlal,

Please see the enclosed extract from a letter which has been received from England. Reports like this have been coming to me from various sources. You will recall the Nizam's desperate attempts to get arms from Czechoslovakia.

2. I feel it is time we told the British Government unreservedly that any supply of arms to the Nizam from Britain would be regarded as a most serious affair by us and that they should use their utmost [efforts] to see that no such supply of arms is made to the Nizam's Government without our concurrence.

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhchai Patel

'now a part of India-in fact, the heart of India...India has become two. Those who were responsible for starting the agitation for the two-nation theory have got what they wanted. But there are still some in the country who cherish the same ideals. To them I will say that their rightful place is in the other country. It is better for such people to go to Pakistan, for their God is there.... I warn such people that if they ever dream that they can get any assistance from outside, or that others outside can interfere in the affairs of Hyderabad, they are insane. The affairs of Hyderabad are an internal problem for the people themselves to decide.'

Patel told the people of Hyderabad while addressing the public at Fateh Maidan, 1949

Last Journey

Sardar Patel passed away on 15 December (Friday) at 9:37 am at Birla House, Bombay. A tidal of grief-stricken humanity swept through West and Central Bombay, as the funeral procession was on its way to reach the cremation ground. The historic funeral procession reached at 7:20 Sonapur Crematorium
